The Welfare Rights Centre is an independent community legal centre which specialises in social security and disability discrimination law.

The Centre provides free information and advice and in some matters will represent clients at a tribunal or in court.

We also offer education and training to community service workers on matters that are impacting on the most vulnerable people.

Our services are provided in Central and southern Queensland and for social security matters we take clients that live in northern NSW as well.

Mission & Objectives

Mission

The Welfare Rights Centre Inc. is committed to increasing the community's access to justice by; providing a specialist advocacy service in the areas of social security and disability discrimination law, advocating for fair and just decisions, and challenging unjust laws, institutions and community values.

Objectives

- To provide a focussed quality legal service in relation to the social security and disability discrimination legislation
- To influence policy makers and promote systemic change affecting the areas of policy and law relating to income security and disability discrimination
- To educate and build the capacity of the community to understand rights and respond to issues in relation to social security and disability discrimination laws.
- To develop and maintain a stable, independent and innovative organisation.
